We hope to go into some of the districts in the afternoon to hold services, as the religious services are all over in the morning. The plan will be continued in connection with this one change. The Sunday service at North Waterford is to be held after 10.00 before the morning service, rather than after it.

Coach Asa Small's nine, which headed for a great season with but defeats, and these at the hands of powerful Big Hebron team, and with stories over Fryeburg, Calais, Lewiston, Bucksport and Bowdoin Schools, with hard luck last week, when Humphries, upon whom the team was putting nearly all its strength for pitching, left school. Small found necessary to take Jack Curran, the string catcher and put him upon mound, and taking the place of the second team and put him behind bat. This combination worked fine. Waterville and Bridgton defeated the state man 10 to 2. Wednesday Coe worked in the box against the Bowdoin String men, and the Bowdoin team was due to pitch against Keegan at Hill last Saturday at Bridgton. A few hours before the game he received word from Portland to come home at once because of serious sickness in the family. This put Coach Curran in a fix. Costello was at the University of Hampshire at Durham with the team. Larson, who has been placed in the outfield this year was placed in the mound and after the first two innings the game proved very close. Saturday was the fourth game of the week, vs. Lewiston High will play in North Bridgton. This game will prove interesting. The followers of baseball in Bridgton are having a hard time this spring of seeing the best school boys in the state as well as many of the league second teams in action at North Bridgton.

Probably the most valuable in the collection is a history of the United States of America, with engravings by Chas. A. Goodrich. It is the 3rd ed.
printed in Hartford, C., by Barlow worn and soiled, many of the expensive engravings are gone and some pages type

On the first page of the Federal printed in Hallowell, Me., in 1826.
Gazier & Co., is the name of D. F. Mill of Norway. Evidently at some time was his book. It was copyrighted by Jacob Gleason. The book is in poor condition. The prefatory announcement was written in Washington, May 18, 1826, and closes by saying that "The author may therefore be relied on, even

The oldest book is the New Testament printed in French, which we are able

On the fly leaf is "O. B. Howe, and

Bound in Wood and Leather More Than One Hundred Years Ago

Miss Carrie Tucker, the versatile writer and newspaperer of this section, hands in some old books. They came from a trunk found in an attic.

Probably the most valuable in dollars sense is a history of the United States of America, with engravings by Rev. Chas. A. Goodrich. It is the 3rd edition, printed in Hartford, Ct., by Barber & Robinson, 1824. The book is much worn and soiled, many of the expensive steel engravings are gone and some pages of type.

On the first page of the Federalist, printed in Hallowell, Me., in 1826, by Glazier & Co., is the name of D. F. Millet of Norway. Evidently at some time it was his book. It was copyrighted by Jacob Gideon. The book is in perfect condition. The preliminary announcement was written in Washington, May 18, 1818 and closes by saying that "The accuracy may therefore be relied on, even to the punctuation."

The oldest book is the New Testament, printed in French, which we are able to read. It was printed in Boston in 1811. On the fly leaf is "O. B. Howe, and presented to Mr. David H. Rowe by his friend, Dr. Wright."

There is always happiness in this world for someone. As the summer wanes the tears of the ice dealer bring cheer from the coal man.

Visit With Former Friend

Left "Down Home" Twenty Years, but Still Interested in Maine and Doings of Its People.

Editor Advertiser: I am enclosing my subscription for another year to your paper, this being the twentieth since I came to live in this city. I would not like to miss one number as each paper is like a letter from a friend, who tells me about the various occurrences of "down home". In one number lately was a letter from an old schoolmate, A. M. Horr of Lovell, Mass., whose cousin was also my cousin. We sat side by side in that old schoolhouse, read from the same book, and sang the songs that never grow old. Even though the names are not all familiar, and one by one, old friends open and close the door to the room we must all enter, the hills and the roads and the village streets remain unchanged. One day I had an unexpected Such incidents warm the heart, and create pleasant memories.

I was also delighted with that picture of Bethel, my mother's birthplace. She was born in the hotel just near the Bethel Inn, which was removed a few years ago. My grandfather once owned "The Elms" and my grandmother's name was Sally Bartlett, though probably there is no one now living to remember her. The stories she told us of the old days are a delight to remember. Molly Orkett (colloquially "Locket") often visited at her father's, Reuben Bartlett's, coming and going no one knew where or how far. Once she said she had come from Malloway through the woods and sleeping under a big log, woke to find a bear sleeping near, which was hard to believe, but Molly said, "You no touch bear, bear no touch you." Grandmother told another story. She said Elsie Ripley (who was Elsie Ripley) was a girl who burned hair for blueberries ("don't see any such blueberries nowadays," said grandmother, "big as a marble.") They got as many as they could carry, when they saw a bear following them, so they turned down some of their berries and hurried on. By and by, they had to turn down some more, and this was repeated until after running a long way to "old Grandis Bartlett's" they did not have one berry. But "Grandis" and "the boys" sing their guns. The soon shot the bear. So grandmother said "we got our berries after all," at which we all laughed heartily. Great grandfather Bartlett was one of twenty-one children, so there must be some descendant living even in Bethel, though I do not know one of them.

It has been one of my dearest wishes to go to Bethel and stay a week where I could see those wonderful mountains in their many beautiful colorings. I wish you could see Worcester, just now in the fullness of spring beauty. The magnificent beds of tulips in the lovely parks. In North park is one bed twenty feet in diameter, yellow, white and flaming red, all in one gorgeous bed. There is always something entertaining. This week Mechanics Hall is the scene of the "Better Homes Exposition". Nothing has been left undone to make this the greatest and best affair ever staged in Worcester. There are many diversified products, more than sixty exhibitions of building materials, house furnishings, heating systems, electric appliances, musical instruments and radios, home finance plans, food products, household goods of every description, of much interest to everyone. Dancing every night in the lower hall.

Come with me, and as we walk down the street, I will show you the house where Charles Dickens spoke from the piazza, and the house owned by John S. C. Abbott, the historian, and where the lovely Blackstone River was filled up in the march of conservatism, where the Revolutionary soldiers mobilized and marched away to Lexington, where John Adams, our second president, taught school, the new Western church, just building, costing $800,000, the finest in the city.

All this very near my home, but many times my thoughts go back to the place where a few steps from the house we could see where Melville Dunham lives, now made famous wholly through his genuine simplicity, and kindly friendliness for all mankind. And the earlier home where so many good men and women lived, their influence far reaching and abiding. The rule changes of time cannot destroy old hallowed memories—Ellen Millet, Davenport, 53 Paine St., Worcester, Mass.

THIS is the second of a series of five educational advertisements, written by The Veteran Motorist for the Standard Oil Company of New York.

Each advertisement contains a definite question on lubrication, and the Standard Oil Company of New York will award $2,500 in cash to the 79 contestants who write the best answers to the whole series of five questions.

At the bottom of this column you will find Question Two. Question One was published in this paper two weeks ago today. If you missed reading it send your name and address, and The Veteran Motorist will be glad to mail you a copy.

The third advertisement of this series will appear in this newspaper two weeks from today. Watch for it.

The answers to the five questions may be typewritten or written with pen and ink—one side of the paper only—one answer to each question.

No single answer may be longer than 150 words, and each answer must be numbered to match the number of the question. All answers must be written in the English language, and are the property of the Standard Oil Co. of New York.

All five answers should be sent in together and the contestant's name and address should be plainly written on the first page of answers.

No answers will be considered which are received later than Saturday, July 17th, 1926. The awards will be made to those who write the BEST answers to the five questions. Question Two

"Of what service has a Lubrication Chart been to you?"

THE motor oil requirements for the various makes of cars vary widely. Cylinder bores vary in size and there are differences in the type of bearings and in the types of oil feed systems. Changes in motor specifications may require a change in oil specifications.

Socony Motor Oil is specifically refined and graded to meet these varying requirements.

From my studies I have also noted a great variety of temperatures in the motor. The explosion generates about 3000° F. The exhaust manifold is about 1000° F. Piston walls get up to 450° F., bearings as high as 250° F., and the underside of the piston head up to 700° F. One can readily picture the need of not only a superior motor oil but also the need of the proper grade.

A SUPERIOR OIL—OF THE PROPER GRADE

A grade of oil that will properly Lubricate one motor may be too thick or too thin for another. If too thick, it acts sluggishly and may not flow to the bearings; power is wasted in internal oil friction. If it is too thin, it will flow too freely and will allow bearing wear; oil will be wasted and the car may be ruined.

Socony Motor Oil and the Socony Chart are your protection. Why trust to luck?

In cooperation with motor car manufacturers, the Socony laboratories, by shop and road tests, have determined and CHARTED the best consistency or grade of oil for each individual motor. A careful check of this data is made annually.

Therefore, I say, Chart Your Way to Safety by following the recommendations of the Socony Chart.

Lesson for May 30

JACOB AT BETHEL

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 28:10-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am with thee and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest.—Gen. 28:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jacob Dreams at Bethel.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jacob's Vision at Bethel.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Young Man's Dreams and Vision.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Place of Vision in Human Lives.

I, Jacob's Flight to Haran. He fled from an outraged brother. His deed and cunning got him into trouble. His long exile from home was the result of his selfish ambition. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Rebekah made her plea before Isaac for sending Jacob away, stating her fear of Jacob's probable marriage with a daughter of Canaan, when in reality she feared that Esau would kill him. Isaac once recognized the wisdom of her suggestion. He knew that the success or failure of one's life is largely determined by his marriage. It was clear that if Jacob were to continue in the line of the covenant blessing care must be exercised in his marriage. Besides, it is a parental duty to see that children are well married. Among Christians only marriage in the Lord is allowable (1 Cor. 7:39). Isaac, alive to Jacob's destiny, issued his command and bestowed upon him the covenant blessing which had come from God Almighty to Abraham (Gen. 27:1). The elements embraced in this blessing are:

- (1) A numerous offspring (v. 3).
- (2) Possession of the promised land (v. 4).
- (3) And everything that is included in the Abrahamic covenant (Gen. 12:1-8 and Gen. 15:1-8).

We should learn from the experience of Jacob.

1. Be sure your sin will find you out.
2. That wrong home life has its perils.

Isaac knew that the blessing was to be Jacob's, yet he planned for Esau to have the place of prominence. He was willing for the sake of a little venison to give to Esau that which God had planned for Jacob.

1. Jacob at Bethel.
2. The Lord meets Jacob at Bethel (vv. 10-15).

With a spirit clouded by homesickness on the one hand and by fear on the other, he had a dream that night in which God appeared to him. In this dream Jacob beheld a ladder or stair reaching from earth to heaven, upon which angels were ascending and descending. Above the ladder stood the Lord who spoke to him. This ladder suggests a means of communication between earth and heaven, between man and God. Jesus Christ is the ladder which provides us a means of communication with heaven (John 1:51; 14:6; Heb. 10:19-20). Jesus became a real ladder to us, bridging the chasm between earth and heaven. He was a real man that He might identify himself with the race. He is very God, really divine, that He might lift us up to God and secure a reconciliation with Him. Earth and heaven, man and God, were separated by the introduction of sin, but through Christ a means of intercourse is re-established. This vision suggested to Jacob that the only approach to God was through a mediator. The angels ascending and descending are heavenly messengers which are sent to minister to man through the mediatory work of Christ (Heb. 1:14). God spoke to him from the top of the ladder and assured him that He is the God who entered into covenant with Abraham and renewed the same unto his father Isaac (v. 13). This assurance embraced the following:

- (1) The possession of the land (v. 13).
- (2) A numerous offspring (v. 14).
- (3) The promise of His personal presence and preservation (v. 15).

This promise was fulfilled in a marvelous way with Jacob and is still being fulfilled with his seed.

III, Jacob's Vow to the Lord (vv. 16-22).

He set up as a monument the stone which he had had for a pillow. He named the place Bethel, which means the house of God. Jacob now vowed that since God had so graciously obligated himself to perform all this for him, he would enthrone God as the Lord of his life and give back to Him one-tenth of all that was given to him.

TROUT FISHING IN THE RANGELEY LAKES, MAINE

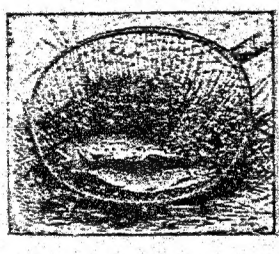

Taken from Scribner's Magazine of February, 1877

During the extremely warm weather, the trout naturally run deep in the lake, and only when they find the cold water in the shallows do they come to the surface. It is not until the water is cooled to 50 degrees that they will come to the surface. Another fact that adds to the pleasure of fishing in the Rangeley Lakes is that with the exception of the land-locked salmon lately introduced, they contain no other fish but the trout and the smaller fish upon which they feed.

There are three varieties of trout, the brook, the minnow or rainbow, and the lake. All these exist in countless numbers in the streams and at the outlets of these lakes. There is still a fourth variety called by the natives the "blackback" trout, the Salmo Oquassa, which is found in the deepest waters of the lake, since their capture by the fishermen and appliances which are used to catch the speckled trout, is not known.

Numerous experiments and continued observations made under the auspices of the Maine Game and Fish Commission have shown that the brook trout, which is the most common, has developed the habit of coming to the surface in the evening. For instance, in reply to a question as to the probable age of the trout found in the Rangeley Lakes, Dr. J. B. Agassiz emphatically declared that "no man living knew when the first brook trout was introduced into the lake." Upon this question, Mr. J. B. Agassiz proceeded to put in evidence the fact that the brook trout, introduced in 1874, was a half inch longer, had a larger head, and various numbers were stamped on the surface from 1 to 10, and the numbers 10, 11, 12, to denote the year. As trout were captured they were weighed, one of these tags was passed through the skin just under the dorsal fin and securely twisted, and the fish was released.

In the course of the two or three years that a large number of these trout were thus tagged. Of course, the chances are that any of them may be caught again. In fact, in 1877, a brook trout was caught which had gained 1 1/2 lbs. in two years.

The Net Result

The entire influence of the association has uniformly been thrown in favor of a rigorous enforcement of the laws protecting the trout in the spawning season and regulating the mode of capture. More than this, it has taken the most active measures in the direction of increasing the supply of fish in the waters to which it has access. Land-locked salmon have been introduced (this is one of the very few species which co-exist with the trout), and a large number of the young of the sea salmon (Salmo salar) have also been put into the lakes. Last season, several hundred salmon two years of age, and weighing half a pound, were captured. This year those of this same age will probably have reached a pound, and in the course of two or three years these fish, which some anglers regard as even more "gamey" than the trout, must become very abundant.

In 1907 Mr. Page transported two live trout from Rangeley to his home in Stanbury, N. H. The male fish weighed ten and the female eight and a half pounds. They got there alive but soon died after being put in the pond. The largest one was 30 inches in length and 15 inches in circumference. Tail spread 8 inches and jaws 6 1/2 inches.

About this time (1867), Mr. Seth Green's attempts to propagate trout artificially had begun to attract attention, and entangling the possibility of failure in transporting the live trout so great a distance, Mr. Page, to make assurance doubly sure, had secured 30,000 trout eggs which had been impregnated by the milk of the male in the method now so well understood. These had been carefully packed between layers of moss, and immediately upon their arrival at Stanbury, were deposited in the hatching-ponds. After the usual interval of six weeks, Mr. Page had the gratification of seeing the newly hatched trout. In due time they were fed, and when they had attained a suitable size were liberated to seek the stream below the hatching-ponds. Thus we have the history of one of the earliest and perhaps the first attempt in this country to take eggs from wild fish, transport them 500 miles, and successfully hatch them.

The determination of the members of the Oquossoc Angling Association fully to maintain the superiority of their fishing grounds is conclusively manifested by their arrangements for artificial propagation, which were made on Bema Stream, at the extreme south-eastern extremity of Lake Moosehmaguntic, under the direction of Messrs. Page and L. L. Crouse. Nearly three years ago, these gentlemen leased the beautiful spot where this stream empties into the lake, and here they erected a series of private and spacious enough for themselves and their families, including a large cooking and dining camp.

The next step taken by Messrs. Page and Crouse was to secure the privilege of controlling the waters of the adjoining township for the propagation of trout. Three miles up Bema Stream, at the foot of a bold mountain, there bursts out from a rocky bed a series of remarkable springs, which, in the spring and fall, furnish much of the water that flows down the lake. The water of these springs rarely falls below 45 degrees or rises above 49 degrees, and is therefore peculiarly adapted to the propagation of trout. The smaller trout from the lake, weighing two pounds and under, make these springs and the stream in the vicinity their spawning-grounds, and in the month of October they crowd the waters in great numbers.

Mr. Stanley, while securing fish for spawn, has actually dipped up as many as six trout of an average weight of a pound each at one scoop of his dip-net. As is their habit, the males always come up in advance and clear off the beds, and in a few days the female follows. So strong is the instinct which leads them to the spawning-grounds, that the trout, like the salmon, will force themselves over shallows in the stream where there is not depth enough to permit them to swim. Just at the spot where the water of the little branch carries the water of the springs to the main stream, the gentleman above named erected a hatching-house.

In return for this privilege, they agreed to place in the waters each season from 30,000 to 100,000 young fry, recompensing themselves for their trouble, if they could, by taking out spawn for use in other waters.

In the seasons of 1873 and 1874, they were able to deposit in the streams more than the maximum of spawn agreed on. In 1874 and 1875, Mr. Stanley's duties as fish commissioner prevented his giving this matter the necessary attention; but the young fry were so successfully hatched the first two seasons, that a sudden increase of small trout has been noted in the stream itself, and as far up as the Bema Ponds, four miles above the hatching-house. Some of the spawn were successfully transferred to other waters,—the eggs had to be carried out in December, on the backs of men, nine miles through the woods,—and Mr. B. B. Porter, the pisciculturist of Crystal Springs, New Jersey, can now show Rangeley trout double the size of any other variety of trout of the same age.

The method of capturing trout for their spawn was either to dip them up near the springs with an ordinary net, or to use a dip-net to deposit the spawn, or to take large trout in the lake chiefly with the fly in advance of their ripening, and to "ear" them until they were stripped, when they were restored to the lake.

At one time in the fall of 1874, Messrs. Stanley and Hayford, who were in charge of the operation, had in a large car at the mouth of Bema Stream over two hundred of these famous trout weighing from one pound to six pounds each,—a sight which could not be paralleled in any other waters in the world.

The camps at Bema look out over the broad expanse of the bay which opens toward the north-west and are very prettily situated. The very remoteness of the camp secures its freedom from the visits of miscellaneous tourists, while the beauty of its location and the excellent fishing to be found in its immediate neighborhood amply justify the wisdom shown in its selection by the gentlemen who control it.

They and their immediate friends here enjoy a coveted seclusion and keep clear of intruders by a lease of three miles of the shore which covers the entire southern end of Bema Bay. Its position, however, exposes the bay in its front to the north-east gales which prevail to a greater or less extent through the whole season. Those who are accustomed to wait for the traditional "fly breeze," will recover with incredulity the statement that the largest trout have been taken in these waters when a north-west gale was driving the spray from the white-capped waves, and when the persevering angler found a seat in the bottom of his boat the most comfortable position from which to cast his fly, if, indeed, the fly can be said to be "cast" when the wind carries the line so straight from the rod that it is difficult to keep the fly on the surface of the water. Yet the keen-eyed trout, at this very time, rushes the most unwarily upon his imaginary prey. A sudden splash from which the spray flies in the face of the wind betrays the presence of one of these minnow trout. If he misses the fly, a second cast almost invariably provokes the fated fish to a more eager rush. Rising through the topmost crest of the wave, his side, brilliant in purple and gold, gleams in the sunlight for an instant. But this time he is fast, and there is a thud as if a locomotive, under full headway, had been hooked.

The Grammar school, taught by Mrs. Bertha Packard, gave their program first, which consisted of first, a song, "We've Got the Mumps." Each one had their head and face all bandaged and it was hard for them to hear the music and try to sing.

Next was a dialogue, "Patriotism at Boggsville," which took in the whole grammar school. This showed a flag raising and all sorts of patriotism, which was very nicely done. These characters caused a lot of merriment.

The Intermediate and Primary schools combined and gave the Marriage of Jack and Jill, which took fifty-five minutes. The bride was Methyl Wing and the bridegroom was Raymond Bryant.
